Expect Revival of Efforts To Combine Anti-Semitic Groups

Anti-Semitism is more widespread in the world than ever before in modern times, although the collapse of the Nazi empire deprived it of its greatest stimulus and the reaction to Nazi laws and methods in most of Europe has driven it underground, according to the consensus of public and private reports of Jewish leaders from many parts of the world who recently assembled at the London conference of Jewish organizations, reports Michael L. Hoffman, in the New York Times.

A survey of these representative opinions from a variety of types of Jewish communities on what to do of them is the root of the problems of the Jewish people's future reveals some bright spots. But the general testimony is that the effect of the war and the years of turmoil that preceded it has been to increase anti-Semitism.

At the meeting were many Jews who spent three to five years in concentration camps, others who survived almost unbelievable rigors in occupied Europe under the Nazis or Nazi-sponsored regimes that excluded them from every normal means of gaining a livelihood, some from small prosperous Jewish communities in neutral countries, Jews from ancient North African communities who live side by side with Berbers and Arabs, and prominent Jews from the United States and Britain. Two long closed sessions were devoted to the discussion of anti-Semitism and the means of combatting it. Confidential research reports into its history, causes and manifestations were considered.

Of the countries that experienced Nazi occupation, Belgium and France seem to have been least affected by the flood of anti-Jewish propaganda that the Germans released in all areas under their control. Representatives of Jewish organizations in both countries praised the helpful attitude of the French and Belgian people toward persecuted Jewish families and particularly toward children.

It was a Belgian, however, who reported that the lasting effect of Nazi propaganda was the emergence of "Jewish consciousness" among people who had never before thought in terms of Jews and non-Jews as categories. Similar developments were reported from Britain and United States, which were open for years to Nazi and Nazi-supported anti-Semitic campaigns.

The situation in Germany itself, as reported by a German Jew from the Rhineland, a former concentration-camp inmate, is little better for the Jews than it was under Adolf Hitler. The Allied authorities treat them as Germans and the Germans still almost wholly accept the Nazis' anti-Semitic doctrines. Case after case in which Jews during the past few months have received threats, been attacked and been subjected to hoodlumism were recounted by this leader of a Rhineland Jewish community.

In countries under Soviet influence, notably Bulgaria and Rumania, the Jews' legal status is very much better than before the war, and efforts to revive anti-Semitic agitation are ruthlessly suppressed by the present Governments. Few representatives from these [illegible] believed that the anti-Semitic organizations in all eastern Europe had merely gone underground. In Poland, from which no direct report was received at the conference, anti-Semitic organizations are known to be very active.

The survival of what might be called organized anti-Semitism, which during the Nazi heyday became throughout the world the appendage of the German political and propaganda machine, is looked for mainly outside Europe. The remaining groups with funds and publicity channels at their disposal are largely in the Western Hemisphere, particularly Argentina, Mexico and the United States.

Scores Bnai Brith Inaction

Addressing a newly organized Jewish War Veterans post in the Albany Park district, in Chicago, Ill., Ira Latimer, of the Chicago Civil Liberties Committee, severely criticized the hush-hush policy pursued by Bnai Brith's Anti-Defamation League and by Jewish politicians in Chicago in connection with the recent riots provoked by Gerald L. K. Smith, reports the Jewish Post, of Indianapolis, Indiana.

Declaring that "Smith is America's Hitler; Lindbergh its Goering; and Colonel McCormick its Goebbels," Latimer charged that the ADL had opposed the picket line established around the Smith meeting hall, and that an ADL official had telephoned his protest to Judges Hellar and Caplan because of their role in issuing warrants for the arrest of Smith and his cohorts on the charge of inciting to riot.

Latimer further stated that from what he had seen of the general Jewish lethargy and inaction in this regard, it seemed that the ADL and other Jews who share their policy of silence would not be provoked to action until a Smith could fill up the Chicago Stadium.

Latimer went on to say that Mayor Ed Kelly had given Smith the "keys to the city." Smith went to his meeting in two official limousines and with a 200-strong police guard, the same police who brutally clubbed Jewish war vets who actively protested the Smith meeting.

"The Kelly action," remarked Latimer, "showed that Kelly is now more interested in the Polish reactionary vote and in similar franchises than in the Jewish vote." He [illegible] that "Jews are not willing to fight such American Fascists and Jew-baiters as Smith but prefer instead to wait for others to staunchly defend their interests and to afford them protection, then it would be best for them to dig a hole and jump into it."

Honor 146 Reform Chaplains

The Union of Hebrew Congregations, parent group of American Reform Judaism, honored 146 Reform Jewish chaplains "for valiant and sacrificial service in the armed forces of our beloved country" at a banquet at Cincinnati, Ohio, attended by 1,200 delegates to the biennial convention. More than seventy-five of the 146 chaplains were present.

Col. Julius A. Leibert and Comdr. Joshua L. Goldberg, both of New York, ranking Jewish Army and Navy Chaplains, respectively, accepted citations from Dr. Maurice N. Eisendrath, UAHC executive director, in behalf of the chaplains.

Dr. Eisendrath paid tribute to Rabbi Alexander Goode, Hebrew Union College graduate and Jewish chaplain who, with one Catholic and two Protestant chaplains, gave up life-belts to four soldiers and drowned when the S. S. Dorchester sank.

Other speakers were Dr. Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis and president of the Zionist Organization of America, and Dr. Zalman Grinberg, chairman of the Central Committee for Liberated Jews in Germany. Rabbi Silver said:

"Civilization will perish unless worshippers to go forth to battle for simple moralities of human life. Accent must be placed not on philanthropy but on Jewish education, the youth and adult, upon scholarship, on academies and on the proper training of spiritual leaders, teachers, community leaders, social workers, and upon writers, books and all creative efforts of mind."

Declaring that the world has "entered the backwash period of the greatest war in history," he warned against "undisciplined relaxations" and continued:

"If we are to conserve in peace what we have envisioned in war, if apathy and disillusionment are not to destroy what hope and faith we have developed and created, then we must put the institution of reli-

Praises Pope For Aid To Jews

William Rosenwald, of New York, National Chairman of the $100,000,000 United Jewish Appeal for Refugees, Overseas Needs and Palestine, lauded Pope Pius XII for his assistance to Jews in Europe throughout the war.

Speaking at an extraordinary regional conference under the auspices of the United Jewish Appeal, Mr. Rosenwald, who is honorary president of the National Refugee Service, expressed appreciation "for the concern and interest which the Pope has manifested in the plight of our fellow-Jews in need of new homes."

Mr. Rosenwald said that the lives of 1,000,000 of the 1,400,000 surviving Jews depended on the American response to the $100,000,000 campaign of the United Jewish Appeal.

In referring to the interest of Pope Pius in the welfare of European Jews, Mr. Rosenwald said:

"In receiving the American Immigration Commission, Pope Pius urged that in the name of 'Christian charity and the sense of human solidarity,' immigration into the United States be liberalized to help homeless refugees.

"The Pope said that immigration can help in solving one of Europe's saddest problems. He also stated that even a casual student of American history is familiar with the valuable contribution made by foreign immigration to the defense and growth of the nation."

Mr. Rosenwald continued: "I wish to take this opportunity to pay tribute to Pope Pius for his appeal in behalf of the victims of war and oppression. He provided aid for the Jews in Italy and intervened in behalf of refugees to [illegible]

300 Saved Against Orders

Acting against orders not to register any more refugees, issued to him by the U.S. Army, Sidney Flatow, chief welfare officer at the Zeilsheim camp, one of the largest Jewish camps in Germany, registered 300 persons in two days, it was learned from a letter that the former New Yorker wrote to a friend, Harold K. Baron of 100 East Twenty-first Street, Brooklyn, N.Y.

"I'm willing to take the rap," wrote the 32-year-old son of Rabbi Philip Flatow, retired, of 420 West End Avenue, who was released from the Army in August at the request of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration to go overseas.

He admitted that although he was under direct orders not to register another displaced person at the camp, deeply moved by the plight of hundreds of cold and starving Jews who had found their way there "against the greatest odds," he was unable to turn them away.

"The Jews fleeing the current terror in Poland, arrive here ill, in tatters, exhausted," he wrote. Many fall by the wayside. Children hidden these many years in the woods, survivors of the German terror, knock on our doors here. The camp is jammed, in many instances people are sleeping three and four in a bed. After weeks on the road, braving the cold, footsore, weary, they arrive here only to be refused admission. This unpleasant heartrending task of turning them away is mine. Yet how can I do it?"

He described it as "a terrible thing to have gone on and on buoyed up by the hope of being accepted by UNRRA, living only for the moment when they can rest their numb and weary bodies and then at the end of the long quest to be turned away" and said that many of them refused to budge, shouting that they "would rather die than go on another step."

The stream of displaced persons included pregnant women, women with babies in their arms, crippled former partisans and soldiers, unaccompanied children, the lame, the sick, the halt and the blind, he declared.

He told of one woman, who fought her way into his office, sat down on the floor and nursed her

Rifkind Saw No Hope For Jews In Central or Eastern Europe

Judge Simon H. Rifkind, of United States District Court, who passed five months in Europe as adviser on Jewish affairs to General Joseph T. McNarney, commander of the United States Forces in the European Theater, declared upon his return to New York that 300,000 uprooted Jews in centers in the occupied countries are reaching the end of their emotional tether and must be given a permanent haven soon if an explosive situation is to be averted.

"These 300,000 Jews, centered in Poland, western part of Russia, Rumania, Hungary and Czechoslovakia," he explained, "have had their roots cut so completely that some new place of settlement, permanent settlement, must be found for them immediately. There is no hope for the Jews, it would seem from my observation, as a community, in any of the eastern or central European countries.

"The reasons for this are, firstly, the spirit of the Nazi doctrines which has poisoned the population has not been terminated by the victory. Secondly, in many of the communities they have been reduced to such small numbers that they cannot exist as communities. Thirdly, the destruction of the communal institutions and extermination of the Jewish leaders have left them helpless and without guidance.

"There is not a single Jewish academy left in central or eastern Europe. In all of Germany I have been able to find one surviving German Jewish rabbi. There are very few Jewish children left in central or eastern Europe. The age group between one and six is almost nominal. In the town of Mannheim, that had had a considerable Jewish population, we found but two Jewish children. In Heidelberg there were but seven."

Judge Rifkind said that the 55,000 displaced Jews in the American zone of occupation were receiving adequate treatment, but that their morale was low and "today are dependent wholly on the hope of early resettlement in a community in which they feel safe, secure and which they can call home," and not just another stopping-off place.

"It must be understood that while they received the minimum for physical requirements all normal activities of living are missing," he said. "They have no stable enterprises. They don't know what languages to teach what few children there are because they don't know where they are going."

Judge Rifkind pointed out that under the normal quota system only about 15,000 displaced Jews could [illegible] year. [illegible] military authorities keep a [illegible] check.

Judge Rifkind, interviewed at his home, 415 Central Park West, said that he had recommended to the Anglo-American Committee inquiring into the Palestine situation that the displaced Jews be permitted to migrate to Palestine and that it present an interim report on this point before it completes its inquiry. The committee, however, it appeared, had not made this interim report.

Judge Rifkind said that he had turned over a report on his work with recommendations to Major General Harold R. Bull, chief of staff of the United States Forces in the European Theater, and that he would confer with War Department authorities in Washington next week before returning to his seat on the bench in New York.

H.I.A.S. Says J.D.C. Wants To Oust It

A dispute between two large Jewish welfare agencies was revealed when officials of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society accused the Joint Distribution Committee of creating duplication of effort among organizations serving refugees by going into immigration work on [illegible]

[illegible] Feb. 18, officials of the JDC had declared that it was impossible to separate relief and emigration work. To effect a compromise, HIAS, which has emigration activities as its main work, suggested formation of a new group in which both organizations would have equal representation, he said. The reply of the JDC was that in any such organization it must have control, according to Mr. Telsey.

"We turned down that suggestion because it would mean complete loss of identity for HIAS overseas," he commented.

Mr. Telsey and Mr. Bernstein asserted that another move to submerge HIAS in the United States was initiated several months ago by the National Refugee Service and the Council of Jewish Women. During a meeting among the three Happy days are here again...

(A SIMPLE TALE TO SHOW HOW BANK CREDIT WORKS)

MR. TWITCHETT wasn't so happy yesterday. He had a problem. He lacked ready cash for his business.

He makes small novelties—does a nice business in them, too. But he normally allows his customers thirty or even sixty days to pay. In the meantime he has to pay his workmen every week, meet his power bills every month . . . pay promptly for metal and wood and other raw materials to earn valuable discounts.

So, yesterday, like the sensible businessman he is, he borrowed enough from the Royal Bank for his current needs. When Twitchett's customers pay him, he'll pay off the bank.

This is a simple illustration of bank credit in action. It shows how bank credit, as an everyday tool of business, provides "working capital" to keep men working.

MOST BUSINESSES ARE SMALL

Not size but soundness is the primary test of any business and of its ability to borrow. We count thousands of small businesses among our valued customers. In fact, most of our large accounts are companies which started in a small way and steadily grew through the wise use of our bank credit. The Royal Bank Manager is there to serve all types and sizes of business. He'd like to serve you.

"A Six Million Dollar Sugar Bowl!"

Unfailingly each spring the sap courses upward through countless maple trees—and with taps, kettles and firewood, the sweet yield is garnered and refined and brought to market, where it brings a $6,000,000 yearly income to Canadian farmers.

This six million dollar sugar bowl refills itself with maple products each year because the men who operate it understand the powerful significance of the word "Conservation". Do you realize how vital that word is when applied to the vast forest resources which provide a large part of Canada's wealth?

If these forests are to remain the basis of our third largest industry, they must be protected from fires, insect depredations and unwise cutting.

They can only be protected by an awareness on the part of every Canadian of the needs and methods of conservation.

By joining The Carling Conservation Club you can learn the part you can and should play in the protection of Canada's vast natural heritage. *Membership is free and will bring you interesting and authoritative information on conservation as it becomes available. Address your letter to Dept. (E13), The Carling Breweries Limited, Waterloo, Ontario.

"MAPLE SUGAR BUSH"

Based upon a picture painted for Carling's by H. W. McCrea, O. S. A., and one of a series of subjects on the conservation of Canada's natural assets.

* A full colour reproduction, size 9" x 14", without advertising, and suitable for framing, will be sent to each member of The Carling Conservation Club upon request to Dept. (E13), The Carling Breweries Limited, Waterloo, Ontario.

groups, Mr. Telsey said, it was suggested that a new group be created, in which the NRS would be merged and to which the Council and HIAS would turn over their emigration work in this country. The recommendation was rejected by HIAS, he reported.

Mr. Barnstein, asked whether he thought the two movements were part of a deliberate movement to oust HIAS, commented:

"Well, at our last meeting with JDC, they told us to come to an agreement with the National Refugee Service and then come back and talk."

Spokesmen for the JDC, informed of the HIAS charges, would say for publication only that their organization had been in emigration work for several years. They added that an official JDC reply to HIAS would be made soon.

At the Hotel Astor meeting the HIAS delegates endorsed the position of their board of directors that "established organizations can best serve the interests of European Jewry by confining themselves to their own fields of endeavor." They also recommended that negotiations be continued with the JDC and that a HIAS budget of $2,100,000 for 1946 be raised to $3,000,000.

Herzl's Judenstatt

Last month occurred the 50th anniversary of the appearance of Theodor Herzl's historic volume, "Judenstatt". This volume revolutionized Jewish life and Jewish political thinking as did no other Jewish volume in the past thousand years.

There is no doubt that of the five greatest Jews of the 19th century, Theodor Herzl was the greatest of them all. Leopold Zunz, Sir Moses Montefiore, Adolph Cremieux and Isaac M. Wise all were towering personalities and served Israel's cause splendidly in that momentous 19th century when so much inner and outer development took place in Judaism and Jewish life. But Herzl was the creator of an epoch. Through his "Jewish State" Herzl became the symbol of the re-awakened creative will of the Jewish people. He set into motion forces which made him the Messianic leader of the Jewish masses.

Herzl's "Jewish State" is the classic protest against the status of the Jew which forced into and kept him in a category of homelessness. It was a clarion call to end Jewish homelessness throughout the world.

It was Herzl's prophetic vision which made possible a modern Jewish Palestine. Here the Jewish nation has come home. Here the Jewish people is master of its own fate and in dignity is building a national life on the principles enunciated by the great Jewish prophets of yore. To the student of social science the co-operative Jewish settlements in Palestine are bound to become the pattern of the just society, the just world society that must arise and bless mankind.

Herzl, of course, did not found Zionism, but he perfected it. He brought Zionism to its logical conclusion and pointed the way for the Jewish people to be counted among the brotherhood of nations.

His great motto which we affirm in our day, "If you will it", is not a legend. Today Palestine, Jewish Palestine, is a reality, not a vision and an issue in international politics.

We can best honor the memory of Theodor Herzl by re-[illegible] to the cause of Judaism and Zionism. I say [illegible] Humanity, shattered and broken, is in great need to hear anew the voice of Jerusalem.

Delinquent Parents

Juvenile delinquency is a term used to describe crimes committed by teen-agers. These youths having seen that the commandment, "thou shalt not kill", has been negated in war, have the erroneous notion that such a command as "thou shalt not steal" can also be pushed in the background. Disciplines do not appeal to the youths who find themselves in the backwash of the most horrible war in all history. Home restraints having been let down, these youths have sought the street, the movies, and dance halls.

Youths below twenty have learned to point pistols and yell "Stick 'em up." Adolescence is engaged in a crime wave unheard of in modern times. Adolescents appear to know everything about the seamy side of life. They yearn for excitement and sensation, regardless of consequences.

What has been the cause of the gigantic increase in juvenile delinquency? No doubt there are many causes indirectly responsible. But, primarily, we feel that juvenile delinquency is due to the delinquency of parents. The parents of our day have abdicated. They do not set precepts and examples for their children. They fail to direct their offspring in the ways of morality, idealism, in the disciplines of religion.

A child's life pattern is set by the time he reaches six years of age. Hence how important it is for parents to know that they are the arbiters of the child's future. Parents can do much to eliminate juvenile delinquency. Careful home training is most essential in early childhood. Parents must again walk with their children to God's house for prayer and instruction and for soul uplift. The old Hebrew sage admonished: "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

Too many children, alas, are reared in luxury, in homes and on food that sap strength and prove enervating, physically and morally. They are denied the opportunity to develop hardiness and cultivate endurance. They are likely to become victims of selfishness.

Hence it is often that the finest exhibition of the nobler aspects of character are found among those whose childhood has been spent in a home of moderate means and moderate enjoyment. Do not make of children little men and women by indulging them in pastimes that are meant for adults. Late hours and costly parties are not conducive to the splendid growth of soul. These are no more conducive to character building than the squalor and poverty which, alas, due to a lack of social responsibility, children of the poor endure.

Parenthood is a holy office. Father and mother dare not be negligent in the sacred duties of their office. They can not afford to be spiritually ignorant. They dare not treat the shaping of childhood lightly or to leave it to chance. Parenthood which is wilfully delinquent is guilty of crime, of crime against childhood and society at large. Let parents return to their dwelling places and convert these into genuine homes, sanctuaries, where dwells the woman of valour "who looketh well to the ways of her household and where her children rise up and call her blessed."

Urge Small Congregations To Draw Veterans

If the personal relationship between chaplains and soldiers can be carried over in civilian life between religious leaders and congregants there is hope for a greater religion among the masses of American people. This was the conclusion reached by the six participants in a panel discussion on "The Synagogue And The Returning Service Men And Women" held at the 89th biennial Council of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, at which Dr. S. S. Hollender of Chicago, president of the Chicago Federation of Reform Synagogues, presided.

The discussants generally felt that if there is to be a renaissance of religious observance in the United States the following must be observed by religious leaders and congregations:

1. Religion must be enriched by greater emotional content; that there must be a reemphasis o ceremonial.

2. That religious leaders must make a conscious effort to determine the practical needs of their congregations in order to meet these needs.

3. That civilian synagogues and churches must have the flexibility of the Army chapel.

4. That the church or synagogue must become the core of communal life; that it must become social and educational as well as religious centre.

5. That there must be greater emphasis in religious education for youth, and continued development of the techniques of reaching those who will be our future leaders.

6. That congregations must be small enough so that the spiritual leader can truly be a pastor.

It was the unanimous opinion of the six members of the panel discussion that there was a widespread feeling among Jewish men in service that the right of the displaced Jews of Europe to go to Palestine must be affirmed by the nations of the world, and that the organized Jewish community must do everything in its power to further this aspiration of the sufferers from Nazism.

gion to work with every ounce of its spiritual dynamics."

He said that temples and churches have three functions for modern man and society.

Rabbi Silver said that "the great reservoirs of a physical and spiritual life of the Jewish people in Europe were destroyed," and added:

"The more fortunate Jews of America, who now represent the largest and the most free and prosperous Jewish community in the world, must compensate on these gracious shores for the losses which our people sustained over there."

Dr. Grinberg, chief surgeon at the hospital for displaced persons at St. Ottilien in the American zone of Germany, who was a prisoner in concentration camps for four years, described what he called "the horrible past and the bitter present of the displaced Jews in Europe." He pleaded that the 100,000 survivors in Germany be allowed to emigrate to Palestine.

Dr. Grinberg reported "signs of demoralization" among displaced Jews, "this responsibility, however," he said, "must also be shared by the Allies who did nothing in the first nine months to eliminate the heritage of Nazism."

child. She said nothing, just sat there staring in mute terror. Finally she implored him to take her child in, saying she could not go another step. Her husband had died on the road and her sisters had perished in a crematorium.

"How could I humanly have turned her away?" asked Mr. Flatow, a former executive director of the Jewish Center, at 131 West Eighty-sixth Street, who has been active in welfare work in New York.

He said he was "sorely tempted to come home and spend the next six months traveling in the States and telling the people what the score is here." He urged that new camps be opened immediately. "Now, before it is too late—every day of delay is reckoned in terms of lives."

More than a century ago from Scotland came the boy destined to be the first Prime Minister of Canada. Lawyer at twenty-one . . . at twenty-nine a maker of laws . . . the full maturity of his genius created a nation—Canada. Statesman and leader . . . inspired in the cause of unity . . . chief architect of Confederation—here was a man of vision, a clear-headed Canadian.

In 1891 Sir John A. MACDONALD said:

"Foster and Develop the Dominion"

In 1622 CALVERT said:

"The Force of their Imagination Led Them"

• Man of vision in the 17th century . . . founder of historic colonies in Newfoundland and Maryland . . . Calvert said to his settlers three centuries ago, "Preserve Unity."

"I see the future . . . it is a good country," wrote Calvert in the early 1600's. Well may it be that thus he prophesied Canada's bountiful nationhood.

Famous English statesman and early pioneer, Secretary of State to King James I, Calvert's ideals of unity have been shared by all men of vision through the centuries since Calvert's time. Today . . . every Canadian can be a man of vision. Let each by his own efforts "foster and develop the Dominion."
